

Wider Curriculum: Activity Passports

'A world class education is about more than qualifications: it's also about your character and wellbeing' (DfE, 2019)

The DfE introduced the concept of activity passports based on the National Trust's '50 Things to Do Before You're 11 $\frac{3}{4}$ '.

The intent behind the activity passports is to give children the chance to try things out, to get a taste of the world around them, to see and do things that they wouldn't normally do, or to go places they wouldn't normally go and to meet people they wouldn't normally meet.

At King George V Primary School, our activity passports are separated into year groups and these have been split further into the wealth of opportunities which we will endeavour to provide in school and the very few activities which should be provided at home.